MOOT PROPOSITION

A girl named Simar aged 20 years, lived in a city in the Eastern province of the Republic of Hindia. She cleared High school with excellent grades. She was extrovert and used to raise her voice for all socio-economic issues.

Her family met a man named Lalit aged 23 years, who worked in the IT sector and belonged to a financially sound family in same community as Simar. Both the families mutually decided to get their children married.

After Marriage, Simar shifted to Vallahbad and started to reside with Lalit. After 2 years of the marriage, she conceived a child. She claimed that the intercourse between the couple that led to the pregnancy was against her consent and will. She was not physically as well as mentally prepared for the pregnancy and was not able to express her feelings with anyone. After initial weeks of pregnancy, she informed her parents about the whole incident. Her parents termed it as a marital obligation and suggested her to do whatever her husband wants. The thought of giving birth to a child caused her anxiety. She decided to abort her pregnancy. She visited a doctor for medical advice. Doctors refused to abort the child because she was 20 week, 6 days pregnant and this abortion is illegal as per Medical Termination of Pregnancy Act, 1971.

Being aggrieved by the medical advice, she contemplated the issue and finally decided to file a complaint in District Court of Vallahbad. Even after filing affidavit for expediate motion in the District Court, she was not able to get speedy relief.

The Courts in the Republic of Hindia are impartial and have always upheld the dignity of its citizen. From time to time, they have ruled judgement and laid down guidelines in the light of the welfare of it's citizens. The judiciary has always safeguarded the rights and interests of women, especially those involved in heinous offences.

Victim then decided to approach the Apex Court of Hindia under its original jurisdiction. The victim challenged the constitutional validity of Section 375 Exception II of Hindian Penal Code, 1860. The victim also claimed the right to abort her pregnancy of 22 weeks before the Hon'ble Apex Court.

The counsel for the petitioner, before the Apex Court of Hindia, contended that the pregnancy of a married woman due to forcible sex by her husband can be treated as rape under the Medical Termination of Pregnancy Act. The distressed situation of the Victim falls within the ambit of the act and the counsel seeks appropriate legal remedy for the Victim. During the proceeding, the counsel for the respondent stated that penal laws of the Republic of Hindia do not penalize sexual intercourse or sexual acts by a man with his own wife as rape further, it solely recognizes marital rape as an offence when the wife is below the age of 18 years.

The respondent counsel presented that the concept of marriage is sacred in nature under the personal laws and the object of the institution of marriage is for the procreation of children.

The issues raised before the Apex Court are as follows:

Issue 1- Whether the Petition filed by the petitioner is maintainable or not?

Issue 2 - Whether Exception II of Section 375 of Indian Penal Code, 1860 is constitutionally valid or not?

MOOT PROPOSITION

The Republic of Windia is a peaceful country with similar law and customs as applicable in the India. In the mentioned country, there is a City of Shipla, where a matrimonial knot was tied between Jones & Stephanie who got married on 23.10.2000 in an arranged marriage system. Within two years of marriage, Stephanie conceived a baby boy with special needs. The increased expenses primarily because of the treatment of the child led to mismanagement of financial expenditure. Jones was not able to cope up with the stress and started an addiction of alcohol which led to constant heavy quarrels and aggressive arguments between the couple, over time the problems between the couples only increased. Every day from the office Jones would return drunk and heavy quarrels would follow.

For almost six months after the birth of the boy this situation continued. For that period Stephanie hid the ongoing problems from her in laws and her parents in the hope that things will get better. Stephanie tried to talk sense with Jones whenever he was in his senses and asked him to concentrate on his responsibilities, but everything was futile. On January 2nd, 2003 Jones came home after heavy consumption of liquor and after a very aggressive argument with Stephanie, he started beating her and left her with bruises on the leg and swollen left cheek. The present incident and worsening financial hardship forced Stephanie to confess everything to her in-laws & to her parents. Due to efforts of both the families and because of the promise of financial aid, Jones vowed to quit drinking and concentrate on his family.

But in late May 2005 Jones changed his job & went to take a new job with a promotion which considerably improved his financial condition. The Couple was leading a happy life. Also, after seeing the better financial condition in July 2005 the financial support from the parents of the couple stopped. Later in that year Jones again picked up the habit of drinking and by December 2005 the relationship between the couple started to get effected because of constant quarrels and aggressive arguments. The reason was again the alcohol addiction of Jones.

Then the history repeated as again Jones was quarrelling with Stephanie. There was a series of fights which later turned into physical quarrels in which Jones was beating Stephanie. On January 5th, 2006, Stephanie felt that she has had enough and then decided to tell everything to her in-laws & to her parents. However, this she was not able to as she was stopped by Jones who physically assaulted her and threatened her that if she tried to tell anything to her parents again then he will kill the child and solve all the problems then and there. After that day, beating became a usual practice and on several occasions, Jones also had sexual intercourse with Stephanie without her consent. Under threat and for protection of her child Stephanie decided not to share the problem and endured the beating, harassment and rape by her husband which became a usual practice.

On night of 21 March 2006 again Jones came drunk at home and started beating Stephanie due to which she sustained certain injuries on her body. The beating continued till 11:00 pm after which Jones went to his room & slept. However, Stephanie was not able to sleep the entire night. she was thinking & weeping on her situation, in her drawing room there were series of thoughts in her mind like about her life, her child & about promises of good life made to her by her husband. In the early morning of 22 March 2006 around 4 am, she took Iron rod in her hand & went to her bed room and inflicted injuries on Jones's head & vital body parts which resulted into death of Jones on the spot. Stephanie then at 6:30 am went to the room and inflicted a hit on the head of her child which resulted in the death of the child on the spot. After all this she sat in her drawing room holding Iron rod in her hand. Later, when around 8:00 am when her maid came & saw everything, she immediately called the police & Stephanie was arrested. #### Objective:-

This five-day Faculty Development Program (FDP) aimed to give participants a thorough understanding of the distinctions between India's new and old tax regimes. The program's objective was to give participants mostly faculty members the skills and understanding they would need to negotiate various tax regimes and inform others of their complexities and ramifications. Report:

At D.P. Vipra Law College (C.G.), the Faculty Development Program (FDP) on the comparative examination of the New and Old tax regimes was effectively carried out from September 12, 2022, to September 16, 2022. Forty people, including academic members and tax-interested professionals, actively participated in the program.

A well-known tax law expert, Mr. Pushendra Kumar Dewangan, facilitated the sessions and conversations throughout the course of the five days. An outline of the historical development of Indian tax laws, up to the most recent modifications and the implementation of the New tax regime, was given at the start of the program.

However, we also noted areas where improvement was needed, particularly in terms of facilities and resources to enhance their comfort and well-being. The visit highlighted the importance of continued community support and regular engagement to ensure the elderly feel valued and connected.

Outcome:

The outcome of our visit to the old age home was incredibly rewarding and impactful. Our interactions with the residents not only brightened their day but also provided them with much-needed companionship and emotional support. Many of the elderly individuals expressed gratitude for our visit, mentioning how our presence made them feel valued and cared for.

Beyond the immediate emotional benefits, our visit highlighted several areas for improvement within the facility. We identified opportunities to enhance the living conditions, such as improving accessibility, providing better recreational activities, and ensuring adequate medical and social services. These insights will help guide future initiatives aimed at improving the quality of life for the residents.

Moreover, the visit sparked a sense of community involvement among our team, motivating us to continue supporting the elderly and advocating for their needs. It reinforced the importance of regular visits and on-going engagement to combat feelings of loneliness and isolation among older adults.
